

Aspen

We adopted Aspen from DRC in the Spring of 2015. We drove from Phoenix to Texas to meet up with Tena, Aspen, and the family that was kind enough to foster Aspen.

I had a Dalmatian that I loved dearly years ago, and I knew I wanted another one. Life with Aspen has been a hoot. She is nothing like my previous dal. Being deaf, we immediately signed up for some in-home training. Aspen knows hand signals (she still gets REALLY excited when we have company), she sticks by our side, and loves to go for runs with my fiancée. She has these short little bursts of playfulness, and she gets silly around bedtime. She came to us crate trained and potty trained. We have no problems with any of the cats and Aspen, even the blind cats don't bother her or get bothered by her. Our small Chi still rules the house, and Aspen is okay with that. My favorite part about Aspen is her dramatic flair. She does heavy sighs, head flops, and whole-body flops. She will ignore you if you've upset her. It's hilarious.

All this to say, thank you for allowing us to adopt this pocket-sized bundle of energy. She has added a lot to our house. As I type, she's pressed up against my arm with her head on my pillow. She's a great friend. We appreciate the opportunity we were given to bring her into our home.
